A possessive adjective shows a form of possession or ownership in relation to the noun it is qualifying. In English, the most common are my, your, his, her, our and their .	In French, the possessive adjective 'my' has 3 forms: mon, ma and mes . Just like the definite article le, la and les , the possessive adjective must agree with the noun it is modifying, both in gender and in number.	A negative adverb turns a statement into a negative statement, e.g. Je n'ai pas de chat.	The subject pronouns il and elle must match the gender of the noun they are representing.	The relative pronoun qui can join together two clauses to make a compound sentence.	When the final letter in a French word is a consonant, it is almost always silent, e.g. chat, souris, furet .	The œ ligature is used in French in words such as cœur, sœur and œuf . It is sometimes known as 'o and e stuck together'.
